Program

Participants will be encouraged to work with peers from across the region as they spend the day in conversation and work focused on expanding the shared understanding of a concept-based focus on curriculum, unit, and lesson planning and delivery. Participants will be encouraged to share their own understanding to this point and work together to come away from the day with an expanded network of peers who are working together to build units, lessons, activities and assessment practices that can be used in their classrooms. Subsequent meetings (in person and possibly through technology) are anticipated to provide opportunity for feedback, reflection and refinement as individual understanding expands through the conversation and application process.

We want to emphasize that no previous experience is necessary – we're all on the journey. This is a pilot collaborative project which may be expanded depending upon interest as other grades come on stream moving forward.

We anticipate setting a spring date for the group to follow up on the work developed during this day.

Presenters

Jason Kupery

Jason Kupery has worked in Education for 24 years and counting, first as a teacher, then principal and now in Division Leadership with Palliser School Division. He is driven by helping students find their confidence and purpose through programs like career exploration, student leadership and wellness.

Anyone who has worked with Jason will tell you he gets a lot done in little time. His enthusiasm for helping students discover their passion and potential is contagious. Student success, both in school and beyond, are always at the top of his mind. In his free time he enjoys staying active outdoors, particularly skiing, hiking and golfing with his friends and family.
